- 1) When considering whether to designate an urban area and whether they should be regulated, the influence of surrounding/adjacent communities should be considered. This has been done in Table 2, but assessing growth potential is a dicey game. I would be best to have a process in place.
- 2) What about rural areas that have asphalt lined their ditches. Some of these ditches run for miles, have low densities but contribute massive amounts of automotive pollutants, salt and sediment to the water supplies. These areas should be included.
- 3) In the flowchart, the outcome "candidate for regulation" meaning is not clear. What, exactly does this mean. Please specify.

Thank you:
